WHOLESALE OIGAR HOUSE FROM CINCINNATI LOCATES HERE

William T. Bishop & Sons Have Le No. 253 North Main Street and will Begin Business by June 15 Next,

Since the beginning of the present year Wichita has attracted the favorable consideration of more wholesale establish-ments of various kinds than she has in any corresponding period in her history, and the indications are that there will be still more frequent acquisitions to her list of jobbing houses. The desirable lo-cation of Wichita in regard to the prospective opening of Oklahoma is one of the strongest points in her favor at this moment, but beyond that is the further indisputable fact that she holds the key to the Sonthwest as the coming jobbing point for a vast territory, al-ready a good field for business.

Yesterday, after having for some me past been close students of Wichita's position and other sivantages, and also after a thorough investigation of the city itself, Mr. Wm. T. Bishop and and his son, Mr. Frank T. Bishop, both of an exclusively wholesale cigar house, which for prices, character of stock and enterprise displayed will be excelled by none in the west. They accordingly signed a lease with Hon. Geo. W. Clement for the renting of No. 253 North Main street, in the Clement block, The room is to be relitted and ready for the new firm by June 15 next. FEDERAL BUILDING.

Work on the Federal building has begun in earnest. Yesterday the fence sur- hand early to secure seats. rounding the site of the same was torn down, under the direction of Mr. Jobst, the con ractor, who stated that although is customary to keep a fence about goverament buildings in course of erection, it is not a requirement of the law, but is done by the contractors as a means of protecting the work for which they are respo ible until the same is finally accepted and turned over. Mr. Jobst says that his experience is that as soon as the public find they can have access to a public building in process of erection they lose that degree of curiosity which they before possessed and are not any more trouble or annoyane there than on any other structure. building is to be ready for the roof by the Fourth of July next, and entirely com-

Blanched Winter Salad. A disused green-house stoke-hole will be found a very convenient place for growing chicory salad during the winter. The chicory is sown in drills, like turnips, dur-ing the latter part of April. In the autumn the roots are stored away until needed, being started from time to time, thus giving a succession. The roots may be put in boxes, covered with sand or clean coal ashes, the crowns being left exposed. After being once watered they are hardly likely to need it again unless their locality is unusually dry. Put the boxes in a corner of the stoke-hole remote from any belier that may be in use, and the chicory grows up crisp, juicy and perfectly blanched without any further trouble. If the stoke hole is not available the boxes may be put under the bench in a cool house, with other boxes put over them o insure bianching.

The French grow this saind in cellars stacking the roots neatly against the wall, with the crowns turned outward; soil is put between each layer of rocts. After being once watered at the start they are not likely to need additional moisture in any ordinary cellar. We grow turnips in the stoke-bele after the same fashion as the chicory. The tops, crisp, juicy and creamy white, are equal to the best see kale or broccoll when boiled, and make a delictous dash when fresh vegoand make a celectous dash when frosh vego-tables are carron. We prefer coal ashes to soil for this purpose. Some effort has been made to grow the blanched turnip tops for market, and they have met with a fairly favorable reception.—American Garden.

The Peculiar Adventure of a Man Addicted to This Terrible Disease.

Ed. R. Pritchard, the clever manipulator the Arkansaw Traveler's "Kaleido-Chicago the other day. It occurred in a Van Buren street car. An old gentleman who had been imbibing a little too freely of the ardent, and who was therefore feeling quite jolly, got on at Canal street. As the our was well crowded, he was compelled to stand up, which he did gracefully enough, holding on to a strap with both hands, while he cracked jokes and told funny stories, keeping the passengers in excellent humor with his droll and with remarks. At Throop street quite a number of peo ple left the car and our jolly friend, with the remark that "people moving out and others moving in, all helped to settle up the country," dropped leto a vacant seat and in two minutes was sound asleep. There he sat, his head thrown back, his mouth in two minutes was sound asisep. There he sat, his head thrown back, his mouth open and suoring like a fog horn, much to the mirth of his fellow-passengers. Presently, however, he seemed to have choked, then came a gasp and an unosmaily lond snort and simultaneously a set of fains toeth flew out of his mouth, across the shele sad lit at the feet of a woman on the opposite side of the car. A roar of hughter went up from the amused spectators, but the old gentleman slumbered on quite unconscious of what had happened. One man picked up the teeth, and shaking the sleeper tried to arouse him, but it was no use. He had succumbed to the influence of the drinks he had taken and was practically dead drunk. So the secommodating fellow-passenger quietly slipped the teeth into these owner's coat pooket and left him slone in his glory. I should like to know what thus old fellow said when he came out of his trance and missed his ivories and found them, instead of where they ought to be, in his pocket.
